THE Batavia Niewesblad of the 3rd instant. gives particulars of the execution of a Javanese woman, Nya Karim by name, the other day, in that quarter, for murder. She was the wife of a headman, and died with firmness and courage, after acknowledging her guilt. The hangman urged her to speed in meeting her death; but, in his haste, could not fasten the noose properly round her neck, so that it took half an hour before she died. The scene was so shocking that the assistant Resident turned away his eyes; the medical officer, who had to certify to death, trembled; and five policemen fainted. Thousands of people from far and near crowded to witness the execution, and they clambered into trees, and perched themselves on housetops to, behold it. Several of them fell from the trees. This case has aroused questions as to the effect of carrying out death sentences on natives in public. It is pointed out that natives do not fear condemnation to death. As fatalists, they believe in a Power which dominates the universe, and calmly put up with adverse fate. This clearly came out in the execution of Nya. Karim. She succeeded in dying with such stoical courage on the gallows that the natives felt admiration for her. With them, in such cases, public executions bear a eroic character.

Thus the Referee :- It is a pity to have any discussion as to whether the Grand Young Man of Cricket shall play in the All England Eleven against Australia. The use of the word 'England' disposes of the matter, except by a stretch of courtesy on the part of the Australians. We all love Raply, but we cannot allow Australia to say that the Mother Country had to ask India to help her to win a pricket match. ASIATIC CREWS IN THE CHINA

According to the Livertical Shipping Telegraph the increase of Asiatic orews in the China thide has its nocial side which calls for the attention of the Missions to Seamon. It says :--

Excepting in the 'Holt' line of steamships from Liverpool, the Ben! line of Leith, and a few others, the substitution of Asiatics for European crows is going on. apace in the principal British vessels trading with China and Japan. For some years Asiatics have formed the crews of British ships locally employed in the coasting trade of the Ohina Seas; but now large vossols regularly trading with Europe are being similarly manned. In many large liners there is but one deckhand in each watch who can speak English; and through this interpreter the officer of the watch communicates his orders to the crew. The quartermasters, engineers, and officers are, as a rule, Europeans, though not necessarily British.

From a national point of view, the exodus of British scamen from this large. section of our mercantile marine has its serious side. But we are just now rather concerned with the social aspect.

With mixed crows, the introduction of heathen impurities into the forecastles of foreign-going ships, in which Christian men also resided, combined with the fugitive nature of engagements and the withholding of wages till the end of long voyages, had a natural tendency to banish respectable. Englishmen from that class of vessels? The kind of Christians who could put up with such social conditions were sometimes found to be less docile than the heathers :

The shipping companies who have deliberately arranged to man British ships with undisciplined heathens are surals bound to take special precautions that the flag is not befouled with heathen morals. and to enjoin on the Europeans who serve with them to give extra attention to divine worship and to Christian example.

GOUT AND CHAMPAGNE. Dr George Harley, F.R.S., comes as a boon and a blessing to men who are afflicted with gout and are at the same time fond of champagne. The general opinion among medical men appears to be that if a podag-rous patient cannot do without the spark-ling wine he must, at any rate, drink it dry, which very nearly means sour. Years ago, when dry sherry was supposed to be the only vinous beverage sufferers from the gout might indulge in, dealers found out that the dryness could be simulated by the admixture of plaster of Paris, and when the trick was discovered sherry went under a clouds from which it is only now slowly emerging. To-day, in the opinion of Dr Harley, the champagne-grower is making a similar mistake, not by mixing plaster of Faris with the juice of the grape, but by placing on the market a rough, immature wine, which to the uninitiated tastes as if it were dry, by reason of its acidity. Did the dryness come from age the champagne might be good enough, but as it is only sourness its effect on gouty patients is simply lamentable. All French sparkling wines have to be sweetened with a 'dosage, a mixture composed of very fine old champagne, sugar-candy, and the very best-aged cognac. The champagne is dosed. with this according to the taste of different nations. Russians take from 14 to 16 per cent. of this liqueur in their champagne Germans, 11 to 13; Americans, 8 to 10; Frenchmen, 8 Englishmen, 2 to 5. Dr Harley says in 'The Lancet,' that the lastmentioned is much too small, and at least 8 per cent, is necessary, because that quantity has the advantage of not only making the wine keep better and allowing the sour acetic acid to become mellowed by age during its contact with the sugar, but during the gradual transformation of the sugar-candy into alcohol some of the most delectable of the fragrant acctous ethers, so highly prized by connoisseurs, are developed; whereas all these advantages are put a stop to by drinking an imperfectly prepared sour wine under the misleading titles of 'extra sec' and 'brut.' It is simply because it does not taste sweet that i we drink it in the belief that it is dry. This delusion is, however, the least misfortune entailed. For it so happens that vinegar-ecetic acid-in combination with alcohol is known to be one of the most potent incitors of gout and liver diseases; much more so than any of the other acids naturally contained in wine. So it is not surprising that champagne has got a bad repute in gout cases. What gouty people have to do is to drink moderately the sweet beverage—for sugar has nothing to do with gout-and enjoy themselves, Dr Harley,
